The park is also home to miles of towering dunes which protect the inland areas of the park from the coastal waters, especially during storms. These dunes are decorated with patches of sea oats and beach grass which are a unique ecosystem all their own. Many small creatures, such as the cotton beach mouse, live among the dunes.

In addition to its beach features, the bay side of the park contains stretches of marshes, scrubland and forests. Nature trails wind through these areas allowing visitors an up-close experience with these habitats.
